Section 4069 provides that n cases of great inconveniences, or something f that sort, the judge may sit in some house within the limits of the county town. A GOOD joke. It is said that Galloway is not a legal judge because his name is not on the roll of attorneys. It was on the old roll. At the election for special judge our readers know Hon. J. S. Galloway was elected. Some of our cotemporaries seem disposed to treat that election with great contempt, and one or more attorneys have spoken in a very decided way. Moreover, there were eight attorneys of the court present and voting. Where is the irregularity?

WE UNDERSTAND Judge Eldridge has written to the clerk of the county court to bring up the minutes, as he proposes to hold a probate court at Bartlett. We call the judge's attention to section 4069 of the code, in the matter, and says that but for the arwhich says: "If for any cause, in the opinon of the court deemed sufficient, it shall be impracticable or inconvenient for any court to hold its sessions at the courthouse, or place designated by law, it shall be lawful for the court to hold its session, or any part thereof. at any room within the limits of the county town, and all its proceedings at such place, whether in civil or criminal cases, shall be valid as if done at the courthouse." According to this, all preceedings would be invalid, unless the law be strictly pursued. We can imagine no great necessity for this step, and submit to the judge, if he can hold the pro-bate court of the county at Bartlett, why the rule would not work quite as well to hold the next term of the Bartlett circuit court in Memphis. The stetute is as plain as a man's nose on his face, that the only place to hold the probate court is in Memphis, courthouse or in some house within the city limits.

BURIND IN THE DEEP.

A Mad Accident Which Caused Two Deaths on Shipboard-The High Sea Preventing Physicians from Boarding the

NEW ORLEANS, September 24.—The American ship Orient, George D. Allen, master, arrived here this merning from Liverpool, with a general cargo. Captain Allen reports while outside of South Pass, at five o'clock Saturday evening, September 20th, while the crew were engaged in clearing the anchor and getting ready for letting go, and while a steam togboat was ahead for the purpose of towing the ship into the river and through the jetties, an iron clock, through which a hawser passed and attached to the tug, was caused by the strain on the hawser to give way and break in the middle, severely injuring George Mason, first mate, and John Mason, third mate, Edward Hanson, seaman, and Wm. Hall, a stowaway buy. As soon as the anchor was down the captain sent a tug over to Eadsport for a doctor. The captain of the tug succeeded in getting Dr. Stockley to go to the vessel, but the doctor was unable to get on board of the ship, ewing to the strong wind and high sea which were prevailing at the time. Captain Allen, on seeing that Dr. Stockley would be unable to get aboard the ship, examined the injured men himself, and found that the first mate was hadly bruised aboard both legs and to it at the close of the call. Just before the mate was badly bruised about both legs, and the third mate had his left thigh bruised, but that neither of them had any bones broken. He found that the seaman and boy were badly hurt, each having a leg broken, accompanied by bad flesh wounds and bruises, with earance of being hurt inwardly. Edward Hanson, the seaman, died at seven o'clock the same evening, two hours after the The boy Hall died at twenty minutes past eleven the same night, with the appearance of having bled to death. Dr. Stockley boarded the vessel on Monday, examined the wounded men, and dressed their wounds. Captain Allen was forced to bury the seaman and boy at the head of the pass on Tuesday morning, as the bodies commenced to decom pose. The miured mates, George and John Mason, were removed to the Hotel Dieu on the arrival of the vessel at her wharf on Wednesslay morning. These men speak very highly of the treatment received from Cap-

BUCKEYE BULLDOZING. Attempt of Republican Negroes to Mob a Colored Democratic Orator

in Logan County.

Kenton (Ohio) dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer, 24th: "Bokes Creek township, ogan county, has more colored voters than any other township in the county. Last night A. J. Davidson, colored, from Athens county, spoke in the district schoolhouse to a goodsized audience. When fairly started a mob of colored people, who had organized in a cornfield near by, armed with corn-cutters, stones clubs, etc., came down on the meeting with a sweep, and yelling that 'No d-d Democratic nigger could make a speech there.' Dr. Godlove, the Democratic candidate for State senator from this district, backed by other gentlemen, stepped before the mob, and, with drawn revolver, said he would shoot the first man who again interrupted the meeting. The crowd thereupon quieted down somewhat and the speaking proceeded, amid mutterings and black scowls from the mobites. At the close of the meeting the crowd again made for the speaker, and he would have fared badly at heir hands but for the assistance of Dr. Goodlove and party, who, with revolvers, escorted the speaker to a carriage and thence to a place of safety. The Republican central committee claim to be much pleased over this dastardly act of mob violence, saying it shows the old patriotic war spirit is again coming upon the

A SENSATION AT COLUMBUS

It Might Have Been Easily Hushed Up, but for the Indiscretion of the Young Lady's Brother.

Columbus (O.) dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette, 24th: "A sensation occurred at the Neil house, at an early bour this morning. Mr. G. A. Irwin, of Circleville, who arrived here late last night, succeeded before mornsent for a number of Masons and requested them to furnish bail, but all indignantly re-fused. The young lady was taken home by West Union, Adams county, while on a visit to her brother. He was called in to treat her pected nothing wrong until yesterday, when she started to Columbus, saying she was going in company with a lady friend, whom her family saw soon afterward in Cir-cieville, and who knew nothing of the visit spoken of. This led to an examination of her Presbyterian church. The affair is a most unfortunate one for her, but the doctor seems to care more for its effect on his own standrest it might have been easily hushed up."

TOOK A TUMBLE.

Sudden and Heavy Decline in Wheat-The Bears Get in Their Work, and the Bulls Suffer Severely-Excitement in New York and Chicago. Chicago dispatch to the Cincinnati Enqui rer, 24th: "The excitement in the wheat market was increased considerably to-day by a decline of about five cents a bushel, after a steady advance of about two cents a day for several days. Such a break in the market was to be expected, owing to the unusual rate of advance that preceded it; and it was the anticipation thereof which operated largely to bring it about. The prospect for higher prices for wheat, based upon the European shortage, induced many outsiders to invest. A large proportion of these occasional and amateur dealers have but small means, and are not prepared to carry a pur-chase for any length of time. They usually let go at the first sign of a de-cline. There was an indication of a break yesterday, which grew out of the precipitancy of the rise, and hence there were numerous orders to-day to sell the small lots which the outside speculators had bought. These orders to sell aggregated a sufficient volume of sales to offset the market; and the lecline would have been even larger than it was had not the regular dealers, conscious o the real value of wheat for shipment, and recognizing the spasmodic nature of the de-cline, begun to buy after there had been a decline of three or four cents. That there was no legitimate cause for a fall in the value of wheat was proved by the fact that the foreign prices were maintained. The demoralization was purely local. One result, however, was a large wiping out of the margins of those who had gone long at advanced prices. The losses, though large in the aggregate, were pretty well distributed, and no laying down occurred. To many of the scalpers who work the 'Put and Call' board on the curbstone the break was a bonanza, many of them on investments of twenty to fifty dollars realizing of from five hundred to one thousand dollars. The excitement of the day on 'change was intense. Those who and bulls, the latter having a little the best of it at the close of the call. Just before the final close an exporter entered the market, and made a big purchase of No. 2 spring for September delivery at $1014. The effect of this was to rally the option market a point or two, but, without giving it any apparent firmness. Both sides seemed glad to haul off for repairs, and, when business begins in the morning, a renewal of the conflict may be looked for. In many respects to-day's dea was a peculiar one. The Liverpool and London markets were reported stronger with an increased demand. The wrecks of recent failures at New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis were cleared away, and a better feeling was indicated in these cities; but, in spite f all this, the bears were able to get their nearly one million bushels. On the regular board the opening figure was $107½, and the price railied to $108%, the highest figure phatic recommendation of physicians confirms the verdict in its tavor. yet realized. At this point the brokers of the Saratoga combination entered the ring, and the work of slaughter began. Point by point the market gave way. The news was flashed to the bucket-shops and the curbstone. Temporary lulls in the falling barometer were caused by the filling of sales made on the comb of the ascending wave, but these had no effect in stopping the rapid plunge toward the trough of the cereal sea. Down went the market to $1 931/2, and then a halt was called. During the decline there was a succession of rushes to the telegraph offices, Special to the Appeal 1

New Orleans, September 29.—Just before reaching the landing at Canal street, t selling when there was a small profit in their

when the gong sounded the price was $1031/4. At the afternoon call the attendance was much larger than usual. The market proved to be exceedingly irregular, the November option fluctuating between $1 03½ and $1 04½, and closing tame at the outside figure. When the bell rang for reassembling in the upper hall the hammering was resumed, and it brought down the price to $1 03%, a drop of six cents from the highes point of the day. The order for export above mentioned stood the tide, and the figure at adjournment was nominally $1 02%.

Special to the Cincinnati Enquirer. NEW YORK, September 21.—The bull movement in wheat culminated to-day. The market opened buoyant, as for four days past, but broke early in the day. The winter grades fell from three to five cents per bushel. In some of the spring grades a decline of one to two and a half cents was noted, but the business was small compared with the dealings in winter grades. Advices of weakness in the western markets increased the general lack of confidence and the disposition to realize. The advance of the last five days has been from five to eight cents on very heavy trading. But, sudden and sharp as the break was, no local failures were reported, although a notice of suspension through several failures was reported from the west, and helped to increase the excitement.

ERRING EVANS.

Straying from the Fold of Honor-A Church Left Without a Paster, and the seas of Honor Minus a Charter.

Vincennes (Ind.) dispatch to the Cincin-bati Enquirer, 25th: "Your correspondent has just come into possession of facts in a case which is destined to create considerable stir in colored circles, religious and secular, both in this city and in the State. Publicity is brought about by the sudden disappearance of Rev. Eugene Evans, pastor of the Second Baptist colored church of this city, although the affair has not yet found its way into the newspapers. Rev. Evans came to this city about two years ago from Boonville and took charge of his church. Although not thoroughly educated, he is an effective speaker, and during the last political cam-paign made himself notorious by entering a political discussion at Evaneville. He political discussion at Evansville. He was married last spring to an estimable colored married last spring to an estimable colored lady of this city. The reverend gentleman has had trouble lately with one of the members of his church concerning a debt hanging over it; but the matter has been given into the hands of the court for adjudication. The particulars of the cloud under which Mr. Evans Sons of Honor of this place that Mr. Evans instituted a lodge here over one year ago, and collected initiation fees to the amount of forty-eight dollars and a half, and promised the matter, and the lodge stands to-day charterless and unrecognized by the grand lodge. The lodge at Bonville, in the south-ern part of the State, was organized by Rev. Evans under the same circumstances as those above set forth, which lodge is also crying trunks, where letters from the doctor were discovered addressed to her as his 'dear wife,' whom your correspondent conversed is one etc. Miss Irwin is organist of the Circleville of the most prominent and truthful colored gentlemen in Vincennes. This gentleman was intrusted with a message on a recent visit to Boonville to Evans, to the effect that, it the Boonville charter was not forthcoming pretty soon, they (the Boonvillians) would skin him. Mr. Evans replied that he would attend to it the first time that he went to Indianapolis. Mr. Evans got wind of Webb's arrival in this city last told his wife and others that he had been

Friday evening, and packed his satchel and called to Louisville on church business, but would return Monday or Tuesday; but he has been invisible up to the present writing. Webb went out to the midnight train for the purpose of interviewing Evans, and accidentally ran against him on the platform. He at once approached the minister on the subject uppermost in his mind. Evans remarked hat after he went in the depot and purchased a ticket he would explain matters, and Webb acceded to his request to await his return. Evans went in the office, and, Webb alleges, went out of a door on the opposite side of the milding and worked around to the dark side of the train, which he boarded, leaving the watcher to his own pleasant thoughts. Mr. Webb announces his intention of pursuing Evans to justice, and will warn members of the Independent Sons of Honor to look out for him. The friends of Mr. Evans are sur-na by his Disobedient Son. Nashville American, 25th: "A terrible tragedy occurred opposite the Lee Tucker farm, on Stewart's creek, one and a half miles above Smyrna, yesterday morning. A negro boy named Jim Cartwright, aged about eighteen years, had, by his father, been taken out of a livery stable to his home to assist him on his farm. No persuasion would move him to do any labor. They started out together yesterday morning on the turnpike. The father urged that the boy should not be 'lazying about the farm,' and insisted that he should go to work. (Hot words were passed, the son grew enraged, and at last, in a burst of passion, pulled out his knife and thrust the blade into his father's heart, killing him instantly. The parricide then fied and is still at large." Cone to Join His Partner. ST. J. D. PLUNKET, M.D., President of the State Board of Health. THE BEDFORD CASES. EDITORS APPEAL-In an editorial of your issue of the twenty-third instant, you directly charge that "the history of the Bedford cases shows clearly that negligence in not thoroughly disinfecting after the epidemic last year produced the outbreak of the fever among them this year." This assertion, uttered with Murrah, Mr. E. E. MEACHAM and Miss LULA GILsuch confidence, is so utterly without foundation in fact, that I am unwilling to let it pass inchallenged, however much I may regret to revive a painful subject. I not only used the methods of disinfecting then recommended, but other appliances thought to be efficacious in eradicating the disease. sought the advice, and strictly followed it as far as practicable, of a physician who had been reasonably successful in the treatment been reasonably successful in the treatment of the fever, and who was familiar with it in climes more congenial to its propagation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation and the congenial to its propagation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation of the congenial to its propagation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation of the congenial to its propagation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation than along the latitation of the congenial to its propagation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation than along the congenial to its propagation than along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitation than along the congenial to its propagation than along the chirty-fifth parallel of latitation than along the fever at my house of latitation, in the section of the cure years and the fever with sites best word that it an use, for I can use, me; and since it could not hibernate where it never had obtained lodgment, it must have been of spontaneous origin, or it was transmitted from some infected locality. Dr. Bradford, who came out to trace the disease, reported that it was carried there in clothing from the infected portion of Memphis. Now, at I leave it to the candid opinion of the Appeal to say which is the most legitimate inference, that the contagion was communicated by relugees from the district in Memphis where the germs were in active operation, or from a country residence where the contagion, if it existed at all, was still dormant. In either case the Appeal's position is untenable. During the sickness at Julian Bedford's, there was, most of the time, unrestricted communication between the two houses. Yellow-fever was not suspected in the first cases until black vomit and hemorrhagic discharges had set in, and in the last case there was no indication of yellow-fever until the second day, and even on the third day a consulting physician was disposed to question its being yellow-fever until the test was made. In the meantame, communication was still fully kept up, and was not placed under limitation until after repeated exposure to contagion. Now, although it placed under limitation until after repeated exposure to contagion. Now, although first made its appearance there, I am unwil ing to affirm that it was communicated to my family from that source. Unfortunately it was at both houses. For myself, I attach no blame therefore to any person whomsoever. H. L. BEDFORD. September 27, 1879.

DOWNCAST DUNKARDS. State Lat A Whole Settlement in Court as Defendants in an Interesting and Sensational Damage Case.

Lafayette (Ind.) dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer, 24th: "For the first time in the history of the Tippecanoe county courts the Dunkards, who are quite numerous in the southern part of the county, have appeared as party to a case which, from the circumstances attending it, is important and in-teresting. John Vetter is one of the unfor-tunate neighbors in the Dunkard settlement. This man has a daughter whose charms attracted the attention of a young Dunkard, the son of Abraham Wagner. He paid her court, and in the course of time she became court, and in the course of time she became a member of the Wagner family. On one occasion last fall Vetter called upon his daughter and some difficulty arose, which ended in the father ungracefully striking his daughter upon the cheek. Mrs. Wagner in haste rang that indispensable adjunct to every well-regulated farm, the bell, and forthwith the Dunkards from near and far flocked to the Wagner mansion. Vetter decamped, but two of the youthful Wagners overtook him and tanned him unmercifully with hickory sprouts. A short time afterward Vetter was arrested for assault, fined and imprisoned. He appealed the case, but the higher court affirmed the sentence of the lower court. court affirmed the sentence of the lower court. Vetter now comes into court and sues for two thousand dollars damages against the Wag-ners, because of the inhuman treatment to which he was subjected by them. One strange feature of the affair is that the two young men alleged to have done the whipping have gone, no one seems to know where. The Dunkard settlement is shaken from center to circumference over this action. Many hem in this case for the first time appear i the courthouse, and it is really amusing to witness their eccentricities. The case will occupy several days."
